

WHAT DO YOU
WANT?
TELL EVERYBODY
IN "THE WORLD"
AT ONCE BY
THE WORLD WANT POSTAL CARDS.

PRICE ONE CENT.

LAST EDITION. ELEVEN SHUT UP.

That Many Dives Have Permanently Closed Their Doors.

Daniel Pickwick Scribner Hiding from Excise Officers.

The Sale at Auction of Dive-Keeper
Tom Gould's Trappings.

May Mortimer's Claim that She Was Lured into a Saloon to Be Drugged and Robbed.

NEW YORK'S OUTLAWS.

[A Table Subject to Daily Change.]

BILLY McGLORY. In the Penitentiary.

CAREY WELCH. Indicted, Dive Closed for Good.

AUGUST GUIDON. Indicted, Dive Closed for Good.

FRANK STEVENSON. Indicted, Dive Closed for Good.

ALFRED DAVIS. Indicted, Dive Closed for Good.

LOUIS WALTERS. Indicted, Dive Closed for Good.

DANIEL SCRIBNER. Indicted, Dive Closed for Good.

JIM SULLIVAN. Indicted, Dive Closed for Good.

J. H. McGUIRE. Indicted, Dive Closed for Good.

PAUL McCARTHY. Indicted, Dive Closed for Good.

JOHN J. McALEER. Indicted, Dive Closed for Good.

JOHN KELLY. Indicted, Dive Annex Closed.

THOMAS McORMICK. Indicted, Dive Annex Closed.

CHARLES SMITH. Indicted, Dive Annex Closed.

JOHN J. McGUIRE. Indicted, Dive Annex Closed.

JOHN WULFERS. Indicted, Dive Annex Closed.

KEEPEE OF THE LENOX. Indicted, Dive Annex Closed.

EDMON BUTTNER. Indicted, Dive Annex Closed.

LOUIS STAJER. Indicted, Dive Wide Open.

IGNATZ BUTTNER. Indicted, Dive Wide Open.

THREE MORE CLOSED FOR GOOD.

The Number of Retired Dive-Keepers Increased to Eleven.

The Evening World's list of dives closed for good is increased today to eleven by the addition of Mr. John H. McCork, Mr. John J.
McAleer, Mr. Paul McCarthy, of 252, 259 and 257 Bowery respectively. These three closed their saloons as well as their "back rooms" last night. With Mr. Louis Walters, of 252 Bowery, they yesterday afternoon received President McKim of the Board of Excise, to keep their establishments entirely closed pending the disposition of their cases in the Court of General Sessions.

Mr. Tom Gould's auction sale of his dive trappings has been limited on a smaller scale by Mr. August Guidon. He dragged his diving outfit, including a life preserver, out of his "French Hotel" at 235 Sullivan street, yesterday and called this announcement on his star-board-station surface.

"For Sale, Cheap, $2.00."

Mr. John Walters ran his "Fountain" at 52 University place in a wonderfully quiet manner last night. He appeared before the Board of Excise yesterday and succeeded in having his case adjourned until Friday afternoon next at 2 o'clock, when he will have an opportunity to show cause, if he can, why his license should not be taken away.

Mr. Dan Scribner, proprietor of the "Pickwick" who was to have appeared before the Board of Excise yesterday, is evidently lying low. None of the excise officials were able to subpoena him, and the consideration of his case has therefore been postponed until he can be discovered.

Mr. Ignatz Buttner and Mr. Louis Stajer will keep their "concrete halls" at 204 and 235 Bowery wide open. There was the same old game of harp-fooling at the tables, and the security of victims was again apparent last night.

MR. TOM GOULD'S DIVE AUCTION.

The Last Knock-Downs Took Place in His Basement Dive To-Day.

It's all over with Mr. Tom Gould's basement dive at the southeast corner of 8th avenue and Twenty-third street.

The existence of the dive was financially terminated this afternoon when auctioneer Thomas Howell's lightning salesman, Mr.
Greenough, who was born and brought up in the auction business, knocked down the last article of vertu in the underground resort which had become so notorious of late.

When the sale began at 11.15 with the sel-

132 GIRLS WERE IN PERIL.

Through Fire That Destroyed a Business Block in Columbus.

Metropolitan Opera-House Among
the Burned Structures.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 23.—Fire started this morning in the third block of buildings at the northwest corner of Rien and High streets about 7.30
A. M. and before noon the entire block from High to Walnut and from High to Wall had been gutted by the flames.

The Metropolitan Opera-House building was in the same block. Fire started in that portion occupied by H. C. Goldman's leather store, and in a short time the entire building, including the opera-house proper, was in ruins.

There were a number of thrilling and hair-breadth escapes.

The shoe factory of Goldman employs 132
girls, sixty men and twelve boys.

The factory occupied three floors, and the girls escaped by going down the ladders with aprons over their heads.

They had not even time to get their wrappers, the fire spread so rapidly.

It is reported that Katie Frost jumped through the window on the first floor and brake both her legs. Louise Auld and Miss Sawney found the hall full of smoke and flames, while fire shut off the access to the stairways. Miss Auld sprang through a window on the north side of the building.

A woman from the upper floor made her way to the lower part of the factory building and there became prostrated by the smoke and heat.

Soon after the fire began to pour out from the fourth floor of the opera-house block, a woman appeared with a babe in her arms stepping out of a window on the fire-escape.

She gesticulated wildly for a moment, then turned and disappeared within. Two officers rushed up the stairway through the smoke and flames, and in a few moments were seen again with the woman and child.

When the flames were so bad that they were saved a margin of safety, and out of those who had held their breath.

The opera-house had been opened for Modjeska this evening, and the seating capacity had been almost entirely sold. Margaret Mathew was to have followed Modjeska Thursday and Friday.

Justice Grady's discerning eye fell upon her and he acceded her the first hearing.

"You are charged with being drunk. Were you intoxicated?"

The young woman turned a decidedly pretty face towards the justice. There was a light glow in her blue eyes, and her only response was a sob.

Justice Grady spoke to her again in a more reassuring tone, and then the young woman said she was not drunk, but that she had been drugged and robbed and to make complete the outrage, thrown into the street to be arrested for intoxication.

On the court docket she was entered as Mary Dooly, of 134 West Sixty-third street, but that was an unfortunate mistake, she said. Mary Dooly being the name of a friend she was acquainted with, and had been a drugged drink. When taken to the station house she said the police looked her under the name on a letter addressed to Miss Dooly, which they found in her pocket.

Her real name was May Mortimer. She declined to give her address. According to the story told in court, she had been out shopping yesterday afternoon, and had been drugged and robbed at the corner of Eighth and Sixth streets and Sixth avenue. They had agreed to meet again at May's.

At the corner of Fifth street and Sixth avenue she had slipped and fallen, tearing a rent in her skirt down its entire length. A man politely offered her assistance, and said he would take her to a place where she could have her skirt mended. He took her to the saloon kept by Sylvester & Wachman, at the northwest corner of Sixth avenue and Sixteenth street.

Miss Mortimer said she had informed the man that she did not want saloon, but the stranger assured her that it was a respectable place kept by a friend, and that his wife would assist her in arranging her dress. Then she decided to go in.

They entered the back room, where another woman was seated. Miss Mortimer's companion insisted that she should have something to drink, and to oblige him she ordered several and lemon. After drinking it, she said she became dizzy, and when she attempted to walk she reeled.

She accused her companion of having drugged her, whereupon Sylvester, one of the proprietors, seized her by the arm and hustled her out of the door. On the sidewalk she staggered and fell, and the woman who came along and helped her for drunkenness.

When she regained consciousness at the
station-house she discovered that she had been robbed of her pocketbook containing $4.75.

Detective Hayes thereupon arrested Sylvester,
but as she could not swear that he took
her money he was discharged this morning.

Justice Grady said he would entertain a complaint of assault against Sylvester, where-
upon Miss Mortimer exclaimed:

"Heaven's no! I've had disgrace enough."

Justice Grady thereupon discharged her.

As Miss Mortimer left the court-room she
was met by her father, mother, and whom
she along and helped her for drunkenness.

When she regained consciousness at the
station-house she discovered that she had
been robbed of her pocketbook containing $4.75.

Detective Hayes thereupon arrested Sylvester,
but as she could not swear that he took
her money he was discharged this morning.

Justice Grady said he would entertain a
complaint of assault against Sylvester, where-
upon Miss Mortimer exclaimed:

"Heaven's no! I've had disgrace enough."

Justice Grady thereupon discharged her.

As Miss Mortimer left the court-room she
was met by her father, mother, and whom
she along and helped her for drunkenness.

When she regained consciousness at the
station-house she discovered that she had
been robbed of her pocketbook containing $4.75.

Detective Hayes thereupon arrested Sylvester,
but as she could not swear that he took
her money he was discharged this morning.

Justice Grady said he would entertain a
complaint of assault against Sylvester, where-
upon Miss Mortimer exclaimed:

"Heaven's no! I've had disgrace enough."

Justice Grady thereupon discharged her.

As Miss Mortimer left the court-room she
was met by her father, mother, and whom
she along and helped her for drunkenness.

When she regained consciousness at the
station-house she discovered that she had
been robbed of her pocketbook containing $4.75.

Detective Hayes thereupon arrested Sylvester,
but as she could not swear that he took
her money he was discharged this morning.

Justice Grady said he would entertain a
complaint of assault against Sylvester, where-
upon Miss Mortimer exclaimed:

"Heaven's no! I've had disgrace enough."

Justice Grady thereupon discharged her.

As Miss Mortimer left the court-room she
was met by her father, mother, and whom
she along and helped her for drunkenness.

When she regained consciousness at the
station-house she discovered that she had
been robbed of her pocketbook containing $4.75.

Detective Hayes thereupon arrested Sylvester,
but as she could not swear that he took
her money he was discharged this morning.

Justice Grady said he would entertain a
complaint of assault against Sylvester, where-
upon Miss Mortimer exclaimed:

"Heaven's no! I've had disgrace enough."

Justice Grady thereupon discharged her.

As Miss Mortimer left the court-room she
was met by her father, mother, and whom
she along and helped her for drunkenness.

When she regained consciousness at the
station-house she discovered that she had
been robbed of her pocketbook containing $4.75.

Detective Hayes thereupon arrested Sylvester,
but as she could not swear that he took
her money he was discharged this morning.

Justice Grady said he would entertain a
complaint of assault against Sylvester, where-
upon Miss Mortimer exclaimed:

"Heaven's no! I've had disgrace enough."

Justice Grady thereupon discharged her.

As Miss Mortimer left the court-room she
was met by her father, mother, and whom
she along and helped her for drunkenness.

When she regained consciousness at the
station-house she discovered that she had
been robbed of her pocketbook containing $4.75.

Detective Hayes thereupon arrested Sylvester,
but as she could not swear that he took
her money he was discharged this morning.

Justice Grady said he would entertain a
complaint of assault against Sylvester, where-
upon Miss Mortimer exclaimed:

"Heaven's no! I've had disgrace enough."

Justice Grady thereupon discharged her.

As Miss Mortimer left the court-room she
was met by her father, mother, and whom
she along and helped her for drunkenness.

When she regained consciousness at the
station-house she discovered that she had
been robbed of her pocketbook containing $4.75.

Detective Hayes thereupon arrested Sylvester,
but as she could not swear that he took
her money he was discharged this morning.

Justice Grady said he would entertain a
complaint of assault against Sylvester, where-
upon Miss Mortimer exclaimed:

"Heaven's no! I've had disgrace enough."

Justice Grady thereupon discharged her.

As Miss Mortimer left the court-room she
was met by her father, mother, and whom
she along and helped her for drunkenness.

When she regained consciousness at the
station-house she discovered that she had
been robbed of her pocketbook containing $4.75.

Detective Hayes thereupon arrested Sylvester,
but as she could not swear that he took
her money he was discharged this morning.

Justice Grady said he would entertain a
complaint of assault against Sylvester, where-
upon Miss Mortimer exclaimed:

"Heaven's no! I've had disgrace enough."

Justice Grady thereupon discharged her.

As Miss Mortimer left the court-room she
was met by her father, mother, and whom
she along and helped her for drunkenness.

When she regained consciousness at the
station-house she discovered that she had
been robbed of her pocketbook containing $4.75.

Detective Hayes thereupon arrested Sylvester,
but as she could not swear that he took
her money he was discharged this morning.

Justice Grady said he would entertain a
complaint of assault against Sylvester, where-
upon Miss Mortimer exclaimed:

"Heaven's no! I've had disgrace enough."

Justice Grady thereupon discharged her.

As Miss Mortimer left the court-room she
was met by her father, mother, and whom
she along and helped her for drunkenness.

When she regained consciousness at the
station-house she discovered that she had
been robbed of her pocketbook containing $4.75.

132 GIRLS WERE IN PERIL.

Through Fire That Destroyed a Business Block in Columbus.

Metropolitan Opera-House Among
the Burned Structures.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 23.—Fire started
this morning in the third block of buildings at the northwest corner of Rien and High streets about 7.30
A. M. and before noon the entire block from High to Walnut and from High to Wall
had been gutted by the flames.

The Metropolitan Opera-House building
was in the same block. Fire started in that portion occupied by H. C. Goldman's leather store, and in a short time the entire building, including the opera-house proper, was in
ruins.

There were a number of thrilling and hair-
breadth escapes.

The shoe factory of Goldman employs 132
girls, sixty men and twelve boys.

The factory occupied three floors, and the girls escaped by going down the ladders with aprons over their heads.

They had not even time to get their wrappers, the fire spread so rapidly.

It is reported that Katie Frost jumped
through the window on the first floor and brake both her legs. Louise Auld and Miss Sawney found the hall full of smoke and flames, while fire shut off the access to the stairways. Miss Auld sprang through a window on the north side of the building.

A woman from the upper floor made her
way to the lower part of the factory building
and there became prostrated by the smoke
and heat.

Soon after the fire began to pour out from
the fourth floor of the opera-house block,
a woman appeared with a babe in her arms
stepping out of a window on the fire-escape.

She gesticulated wildly for a moment, then turned and disappeared within. Two officers rushed up the stairway through the smoke
and flames, and in a few moments were seen
again with the woman and child.

When the flames were so bad that they were saved a margin of safety, and out of those who had held their breath.

The opera-house had been opened
for Modjeska this evening, and the seating capacity had been almost entirely sold. Margaret Mathew was to have followed Modjeska
Thursday and Friday.

Justice Grady's discerning eye fell upon
her and he acceded her the first hearing.

"You are charged with being drunk. Were you intoxicated?"

The young woman turned a decidedly pretty face towards the justice. There was a light glow in her blue eyes, and her only response was a sob.

Justice Grady spoke to her again in a more reassuring tone, and then the young woman
said she was not drunk, but that she had
been drugged and robbed and to make complete the outrage, thrown into the street to
be arrested for intoxication.

On the court docket she was entered as
Mary Dooly, of 134 West Sixty-third street, but that was an unfortunate mistake, she said. Mary Dooly being the name of a friend
she was acquainted with, and had been a drugged drink. When taken to the station house
she said the police looked her under the name on a letter addressed to Miss Dooly, which they
found in her pocket.

Her real name was May Mortimer. She declined to give her address. According to the story told in court, she had been out shopping
yesterday afternoon, and had been drugged
and robbed at the corner of Eighth and Sixth streets and Sixth avenue. They had agreed to meet again at May's.

At the corner of Fifth street and Sixth
avenue she had slipped and fallen, tearing a rent in her skirt down its entire length. A man politely offered her assistance, and said he would take her to a place where she could have her skirt mended. He took her to the saloon kept by Sylvester & Wachman, at the northwest corner of Sixth avenue and Sixteenth street.

Miss Mortimer said she had informed the
man that she did not want saloon, but the
stranger assured her that it was a respectable place kept by a friend, and that his wife would assist her in arranging her dress. Then she decided to go in.

They entered the back room, where another woman was seated. Miss Mortimer's companion insisted that she should have something to drink, and to oblige him she ordered several and lemon. After drinking it, she said she became dizzy, and when she attempted to walk she reeled.

She accused her companion of having drugged her, whereupon Sylvester, one of the proprietors, seized her by the arm and hustled her out of the door. On the sidewalk
she staggered and fell, and the woman who came along and helped her for drunkenness.

When she regained consciousness at the
station-house she discovered that she had
been robbed of her pocketbook containing $4.75.

Detective Hayes thereupon arrested Sylvester,
but as she could not swear that he took
her money he was discharged this morning.

Justice Grady said he would entertain a
complaint of assault against Sylvester, where-
upon Miss Mortimer exclaimed:

"Heaven's no! I've had disgrace enough."

Justice Grady thereupon discharged her.

As Miss Mortimer left the court-room she
was met by her father, mother, and whom
she along and helped her for drunkenness.

When she regained consciousness at the
station-house she discovered that she had
been robbed of her pocketbook containing $4.75.

Detective Hayes thereupon arrested Sylvester,
but as she could not swear that he took
her money he was discharged this morning.

Justice Grady said he would entertain a
complaint of assault against Sylvester, where-
upon Miss Mortimer exclaimed:

"Heaven's no! I've had disgrace enough."

Justice Grady thereupon discharged her.

As Miss Mortimer left the court-room she
was met by her father, mother, and whom
she along and helped her for drunkenness.

When she regained consciousness at the
station-house she discovered that she had
been robbed of her pocketbook containing $4.75.

Detective Hayes thereupon arrested Sylvester,
but as she could not swear that he took
her money he was discharged this morning.

Justice Grady said he would entertain a
complaint of assault against Sylvester, where-
upon Miss Mortimer exclaimed:

"Heaven's no! I've had disgrace enough."

Justice Grady thereupon discharged her.

As Miss Mortimer left the court-room she
was met by her father, mother, and whom
she along and helped her for drunkenness.

When she regained consciousness at the
station-house she discovered that she had
been robbed of her pocketbook containing $4.75.

Detective Hayes thereupon arrested Sylvester,
but as she could not swear that he took
her money he was discharged this morning.

Justice Grady said he would entertain a
complaint of assault against Sylvester, where-
upon Miss Mortimer exclaimed:

"Heaven's no! I've had disgrace enough."

Justice Grady thereupon discharged her.

As Miss Mortimer left the court-room she
was met by her father, mother, and whom
she along and helped her for drunkenness.

When she regained consciousness at the
station-house she discovered that she had
been robbed of her pocketbook containing $4.75.

Detective Hayes thereupon arrested Sylvester,
but as she could not swear that he took
her money he was discharged this morning.

Justice Grady said he would entertain a
complaint of assault against Sylvester, where-
upon Miss Mortimer exclaimed:

"Heaven's no! I've had disgrace enough."

Justice Grady thereupon discharged her.

As Miss Mortimer left the court-room she
was met by her father, mother, and whom
she along and helped her for drunkenness.

When she regained consciousness at the
station-house she discovered that she had
been robbed of her pocketbook containing $4.75.

Detective Hayes thereupon arrested Sylvester,
but as she could not swear that he took
her money he was discharged this morning.

Justice Grady said he would entertain a
complaint of assault against Sylvester, where-
upon Miss Mortimer exclaimed:

"Heaven's no! I've had disgrace enough."

Justice Grady thereupon discharged her.

As Miss Mortimer left the court-room she
was met by her father, mother, and whom
she along and helped her for drunkenness.

When she regained consciousness at the
station-house she discovered that she had
been robbed of her pocketbook containing $4.75.

Detective Hayes thereupon arrested Sylvester,
but as she could not swear that he took
her money he was discharged this morning.

Justice Grady said he would entertain a
complaint of assault against Sylvester, where-
upon Miss Mortimer exclaimed:

"Heaven's no! I've had disgrace enough."

Justice Grady thereupon discharged her.

As Miss Mortimer left the court-room she
was met by her father, mother, and whom
she along and helped her for drunkenness.

When she regained consciousness at the
station-house she discovered that she had
been robbed of her pocketbook containing $4.75.

Detective Hayes thereupon arrested Sylvester,
but as she could not swear that he took
her money he was discharged this morning.

Justice Grady said he would entertain a
complaint of assault against Sylvester, where-
upon Miss Mortimer exclaimed:

"